

Soul Message

By
Yeye Fayomi Falade Aworeni Obafemi

Vignette #5 Daughters and Fathers

I am a daughter who remembers the last moment of my father's life as he raised me high in the air. When he held me in his arms and love flowed from him to me and I knew...

Knew that I was safe, protected, and not alone but above all loved as a precious jewel which no one had... My Daddy was my joy then and still and when he left me in a death not of his making, it was not alone but with powerful and strong men who showed me what love looked like. So when I made choices based upon faulty decisions of trying to "make a man", I see my Baba's standing there saying, "Baby girl, you know better, you know what love is".

When a man gets over his "manhood" issues he can finally show affection towards his son which will be hardened and/or damaged without it.

When a man gets over his "manhood" issues he can finally show affection towards his son which will be hardened and/or damaged without it.